Dear Commissioner Henney:

I am appalled at the way the FDA allows the sub-therapeutic use of antibiotics in live stock, when it's obvious that it's dangerous. Human abuse is as much a problem as agricultural abuse.

European people are much more alert to these dangers than here in the USA. The people <sup>there</sup> have even rebelled against GMO's (genetically altered foods) which I'm against, especially when the product doesn't have to be labeled as such. We are kept in the dark about many things; hasn't the FDA fallen down on the job.

Soy-Corn - and even potatoes are mostly genetically altered and the dangers of GMO's pollinating organic crops is inevitable.

I wish the American people would care. What can I do - they say. They can do a lot! To my knowledge - 40% of all antibiotics in the US are fed to animals.

Please respond to my letter.

your truly

Agnes Eanes

P.S. Will my letter help?
